

Georgetown Tables All Set for a Feast

A sight that pleases the eye and appeals to the imagination is the dinner table all spread with a lacy cloth and set with gleaming china and silver and spotless crystal, centered with fresh flowers and tall candles and ready for Thanksgiving dinner.

Just such a beautiful spectacle will be seen in eight different Georgetown houses on Nov. 19, when the Georgetown Garden Club will sponsor, for the benefit of landscaping the entrance and recreation area of the Jelleff Branch of the Boys' Club of Washington, a tour of eight homes.

Between 1 and 5 p. m. the doors will be open at the residences of Rep. and Mrs. Gordon Gray, Associate Justice and Mrs. John Marshall Harlan, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Warder Thoron, Rose Greely, Mr. and Mrs. Desmond Fitzgerald, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Hunt, Dr. and Mrs. Paul B. Magnuson and the Director of the National Gallery of Art and Mrs. John Walker II.

The dining table in each house will be set on the day of the tour with the proper background for a particular course of the meal: soup, fish, turkey, salad, etc. Each table will have an appropriate centerpiece of fresh flowers and the mood of the table setting will be in keeping with the architecture and furnishings of the house.

For all of this looking at tables and thinking about Thanksgiving dinner, the tourists ought to be very thankful for another feature of the tour—tea served in the Orangery of Dumbarton Oaks.

Thomas A. Parrott is chairman of the committee and Mrs. Neill Phillips is president of the Garden Club. Tickets may be obtained by writing to Mrs. Julian Schley, 2815 Dumbarton ave. nw., Washington 7, D. C., or at any of the tour houses on the day of the tour.
